

Partnership Launches Website JHCOVID.COM Highlighting Community Resources

Jackson – A four-organization partnership made up of Emergency Services, Teton County’s Health Department, St. John’s Health, and the Town of Jackson announced a new website today, which aggregates information and resources highlighting our community’s response to the novel coronavirus COVID-19.

The webpage can be viewed at www.jhccovid.com and is a single location for finding high-level information and links to partner sites with specialties in various areas.

“Our community is filled with so many amazing organizations, businesses, and resources and this website is one avenue for cutting down on information overload in an effort to help the community find the resources they need during these unprecedented times, shared Susan Scarlata, Emergency Services - External Affairs.

Things are dynamic and shifting all the time. JHCovid.com is just one of the many ways this partnership is working hard to provide accurate, coordinated, timely, and accessible information for our community.

The website includes links to information maintained by our community healthcare experts, St. John’s Health and the Health Department, which remain the best resources for learning about the COVID-19 virus. Other pages focus on food assistance, financial assistance, business assistance, business closures, mental health suggestions, and a link to a list of restaurants offering takeout options as our community continues to practice social distancing.

JHCovid.com will be updated regularly with further resources and new information as it becomes available.
